As you know, there are many roles in the current health care delivery systems in Taiwan, i.e. superintendent, chiefs of departments or divisions, clinical physicians, nursing personnel, therapists, and social workers...etc. Which role in the hospital does not usually belong to the main / core member of the Long-Term Care Team if this hospital also has the mission or commitment of Long-Term Care service delivery? Why?

3. You are supposed to hear about “Residential care”, “Institutionalized care” or “Care in the facility” in your experience? Is there any relationship, linkage or difference among these terms or descriptions? Briefly discuss it please!

4. “Care manager / Case manager” may own many roles at the same time. They may include Instructor, Coordinator, Evaluator / Assessor, Allocator...etc. Which role is prominent in Taiwan? Rather, a main caregiver could be included in somewhere practically, do you think it is appropriate or not? Why?
5. A metropolitan community with an elderly population of 50 thousand is calling for a project to assess the needs of its dependent elders. Assuming that you are invited to carry out the project, you are required to submit a proposal. In your proposal, you may want to describe the following components:

 - (B) A sampling scheme for the assessment of needs.
 - (C) Measurements to be used for the assessment.
 - (D) What statistical methods may be used to examine the factors associated with the care needs of the dependent elders? Why?
6. Theoretical frameworks are indispensable for conceptualizing phenomena in long-term care settings. As an investigator and practitioner, you have the advantage possessing knowledge of long-term care theories. A specific area of consideration lies in the theories related to long-term care service use behaviors. Please describe a couple of theories related to home care service use for frail elders and family caregivers. If your knowledge on the theories is rather limited, you may describe what the factors from your clinical experiences are related to the behavior of home care service use for elders and their caregivers.
