Notes:	1. The term “remote teaching” as used in the Implementation Measures for Remote Teaching refers to interactive teaching conducted by teachers and students via social media, computer networks, video channels, and other transmission media. 2. “Remote courses” refers to remotely taught courses or remotely assisted courses. (1) “Remotely taught courses” refers to programs in which courses are taught using remote teaching methods for at least half of the total course hours and reported to the Ministry of Education for reference. (2) “Remotely assisted courses” refers to programs in which the number of hours taught using remote teaching methods is less than half of the total course hours. 3. Instructors who teach remote courses should use the University’s digital learning platform (iLms) or a learning management system (Zuvio) with teaching implementation, recording students’ learning situations and other learning support functions. 4. After the semester is over, the remote course syllabus for the entire semester, teacher–student interaction records, evaluation records, and students’ lecture records and work reports for the remote courses should be compiled by the instructor into a remote course evaluation report, which should be submitted to the course department. After formal review by the department, college, and center, it will be sent to the Remote and Digital Teaching Promotion Committee for review and the University Curriculum Committee for reference.
